The University News is dedicated to providing its readers with objective information, free of bias and persuasion. It is our responsibility to inform readers so they can make fact-based decisions.

Recently, a staff writer urged the Crestwood Neighborhood Association to welcome the Rockhill Tennis Club to a location near campus.

This was the same writer who reported on the topic in the Feb. 1 issue of the University News. In a letter to the association, the writer said, "After speaking with [Rockhill Tennis Club] and examining their plans and intentions, I respectfully request that Crestwood welcome them into our neighborhood."

This letter in no way reflects the opinions of the University News or its staff.

We follow a specific code of ethics that requires separation of reporting from commentary, which was violated by this writer's action.

This violation has been addressed and handled appropriately.

The University News would like to formally apologize to the members of the Crestwood Neighborhood Association and to its readers for violating this code.

Please accept this apology as we continue to work our hardest to serve our campus and community.
